	joined the meeting and confirmed that he had legal advice that the original planning condition that required the creation of the school car park was flawed and that there was no legal obligation on him to retain this as a car park and that he had therefore dug up the entrance and exit and applied for permission to build houses on that site as part of a redevelopment of the wider site that includes the current industrial units. Easingwold Town Council confirmed that as this was a very important community asset it would be prepared to adopt the school car park and take over responsibility for owning and maintaining it. However, the owner made it clear that he was not prepared to consider handing it over as a community asset and would continue with his plans to build on the site. The Town Council expressed disappointment at this and reiterated its position of
